ABSTRACT

An analysis of population by zipcode was conducted to compare regional demographic characteristics with college credit enrollment for the three colleges in the San Diego Community College District, and to determine college participation rates for the adult population in the district. Enrollment data for the fall 1991 semester were compared with population data from the 1990 census. Study findings included the following: (1) the total student population at San Diego City College (SDCC), regardless of place of residence, is 40.9% White, 20.7% African American, 19.9% Latino, 5.4% Asian, 4.3% Filipino, 2.2% Southeast Asian, and 0.3% Pacific Islander; (2) the adult population of the SDCC service area is 14.3% African American, 22.6% Latino, and 9.6% Asian, Pacific Islander, or Filipino; (3) enrollment from the service area of 24.9% African American, 19.6% Latino and 8.7% Asian, Pacific Islander, or Filipino; (4) participation rates from the SDCC service area are 4.42% for African Americans, 2.2% for Latinos, and 3.35% for Asians, Pacific Islanders, or Filipinos; (5) enrollments at Mesa College and Miramar are 64.3% and 63.6% White, respectively; and (6) less than 35% of students at Miramar College live within the service area. Includes tables and maps showing adult population by race and zipcode; enrollment figures by race for each college in the SDCCD; and information on service area demographics, enrollment by race, and participation rate by race for each college in the district. INTRODUCTION

An analysis of population by ZIP code permits comparison of regional demographic characteristics with college credit enrollment for the three colleges in the San Diego Community College District. The use of ZIP codes facilitates merging student address records with demographic and enrollment files from the mainframe to allow boundary matching in a mapping software package. The analyses chosen for this report include racial/ethnic categorization for the adult population and for enrollment, which permits the derivation of participation rates by ZIP code. Participation rates measure the percent of the adult population enrolled in a district credit program.

LIMITATIONS

Enrollment data are from the Fall, 1991 semester. Population data are from the 1990 census, which uses the census tract as the primary boundary for data summary. Census tracts tend to be much smaller than ZIP code boundaries, and the boundaries of each are not always contiguous. The ZIP code population for this report has been derived using the mapping software to construct ZIP code boundaries from groups of census tracts. While it is difficult if not impossible to estimate the accuracy of this method, most ZIP code boundaries constructed in this way very nearly matched the actual ZIP code boundaries. Although there may have been changes in the population from the April 1, 1990 census count and Fall 1991, these changes should not significantly affect participation rates. Additionally, census data is limited to the adult population, whereas attendance figures include students under age 18. Districtwide, this amounted to 6.8% of all credit students in Fall, 1991.

The United States Census Bureau collects race and ethnic data in six categories: White, Black, Asian, American Indian, Other, and Persons of Hispanic Origin. For this reason, the detailed categories collected on the college application have been recategorized to match the census data. Of particular concern is the treatment of the Filipino population, which has been added to the Asian category for comparison to census data and in the enrollment table but is shown separately on the enrollment maps. Unless otherwise specified, the Asian or Asian/Pacific Islander categories include the Filipino population.

Results have also been summarized by campus "service area." Although California residents are free to attend any community college without regard to residency within the district boundaries, the division of the district into these areas helps to assess the level of service being provided to the local community and may assist in gauging the effectiveness of campus promotional efforts. For the purpose of this report, service areas have been determined by past (pre-1981) boundaries, by proximity to the campus, and by including those ZIP codes that each campus typically selected for class schedule bulk mailing.

FUTURE APPLICATIONS

Census data available to date include only race/ethnicity, housing units, and adult population. More detailed information will be released in 1992 and 1993, and will include income and employment information, as well as more detailed demographic data, which can be incorporated into future reports.
